Reference Letter for Arezoo Izadi

Arezoo Izadi completed an internship at Litlog from April 2023 to September 2023.

Litlog is a student online publication in the field of cultural journalism. The university project has been in existence since 2010 and was first financed by third-party funds, now solely by university funds. It is located at the University of Göttingen's German department. It offers students the opportunity to gain experience in journalistic writing about cultural topics, with the support and guidance of graduate students and PhD candidates. Litlog's free writers have the possibility of reviewing current books, covering local theatre premieres or readings. Additionally, Litlog publishes essays, interviews, comments, conference reports or smaller academic formats. Each week, two to three articles are published. The website had a reach of around 60,000 visitors and 300,000 views in 2023. Litlog is supposed to be a publication opportunity for as many students as possible. Therefore, it is not unusual that some authors only sporadically submit contributions to the platform.

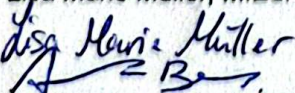

During the internship, Arezoo Izadi researched and wrote articles, attended editorial meetings, edited articles, and contributed teasers for our social media accounts. Arezoo Izadi has thus far published the following articles at Litlog:

- »Exploring the Meaning of Life« (event report of Nobel Prize winner Paul Nurse's talk at the Göttinger Literaturherbst, published December 15, 2023)
- »Frankenstein, the Queer and the Mother« (queer reading of Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, published July 20, 2023)
- »The Story of the Duchess: Lucrezia, the Tigress« (review of Maggie O'Farrell's The Marriage Portrait, published November 20, 2024)

We at Litlog are thankful for Arezoo Izadi's contributions and wish her good luck and all the best for her future professional endeavours!

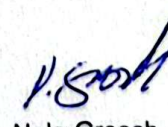

Kind regards,
